MARRIAGE OF JEWESS, NEGRO GETS RABBINICAL BODY'S O.K.

NEW YORK (JP)—The marriage of a Jewish girl to a Negro boy who wishes to convert to Judaism has been approved by the responsa committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis (CCAR).

The committee, whose chairman is Dr. Israel Bettan, a member of the faculty of Hebrew Union College, revealed its decision in the CCAR JOURNAL, the Reform rabbinical group's quarterly publication.

The young man, a writer and a university graduate, has been attending Jewish services and writing reports on the Jewish books he reads. He intends to convert to Judaism. The girl is still a student at a university. They are both over 21 and had been engaged for a year and a half at the time of the responsa.

THE GIRL'S family rabbi, who requested the responsa group's opinion, says he has endeavored to discourage the union, but the couple remain steadfast in their emotions and convictions.

"The girl's family is violently opposed to the match, insisting I do not officiate," the rabbi told Dr. Bettan's committee. In its reply, the responsa committee stressed that "the Jewish attitude to intermarriage, all through history, has been conditioned by religious, in some instances even by political, but never by purely racial considerations.

"IN THE RABBINIC halaka, conversion to Judaism given the convert the status of a Jew, qualifying him for marriage with members of our religious group," the committee said.

"Since the young man in question, though of Negro race, is desirous of adopting the religion of his Jewish fiancée, there is no valid reason, having its basis in Jewish law, why the couple shall not be united in matrimony by a rabbi," the committee ruled.

The responsa committee advised the rabbi that if he solemnized the marriage he would be doing no more than the duty required of him. It suggested, however, that if because of his personal relationship with the members of the young woman's family he deemed it inexpedient to act as the officiating minister, he could arrange with another rabbi in the area to perform the service.

RECONSTRUCTIONIST TEMPLES JOIN IN FIRST OVER-ALL BODY

NEW YORK (JP)—For the first time in its 30-year history the Jewish Reconstructionist movement has taken a step toward establishing an over-all organization of synagogues subscribing to its philosophy.

Four congregations in three states joined this week to launch the Reconstructionist Fellowship of Congregations. An additional number of congregations are expected to affiliate with the Fellowship in the coming months.

The four congregations which became charter members at a conference of delegates and rabbis held at the Society for the Advancement of Judaism are: Society for the Advancement of Judaism, New York City; Niles Township Jewish Congregation, Skokie, Ill.; Temple Sinai, Buffalo, N. Y.; and Temple Beth-El Zedek, Indianapolis, Ind.

IN A STATEMENT adopted by the new Fellowship, the group said that until now, the Reconstructionist movement has confined itself to the promulgation of a philosophy and program of Judaism which it considers indispensable to Jewish survival and creativity. The movement has refrained from organizational activity, the statement asserted, "so as not to add one more Jewish denomination to those already existing."

"The purpose of the Reconstructionist movement is to achieve in Jewish life unity, creativity, and spirituality by means of religion without supernaturalism, collective consciousness without state nationalism, and a way of life without uniformity."

The statement added that the congregations forming the new organization have decided to meet "a crisis . . . in Judaism whereby many Jews are losing interest in perpetuating Jewish life, despite the apparent upswing in congregational affiliation and increase in religious school population."

Officers elected were: Louis Borins, Buffalo, N. Y., president; Manuel I. Leve, Indianapolis, Ind., vice-president; Myron Greisdorf, Skokie, Ill., secretary; Sidney Musher, New York City, treasurer

AFTER JULY VOTING

Believes He Can Do More In Private Citizen Role

TEL AVIV (JP)—Reliable circles have reported here that David Ben-Gurion will be neither prime minister nor defense minister in the future government of Israel, having decided to retire to his home in Sdeh Boker immediately after the July 26 election to the Knesset.

It was asserted that Ben-Gurion had accepted the post of defense minister when he returned to the government Feb. 21 only on the stipulation that he would aid his party's (Mapai) cause in the election.

The former prime minister is said to feel that he might better serve the interest of Israel as a private citizen than as a member of the government. An intimate acquaintance of Ben-Gurion told THE POST that the "Old Man" is still persuaded that the most vital needs of Israel are the revival of a large, popular pioneering movement, and the introduction of a regional electoral system.

The "Shepherd of Sde Boker" returned to active participation in Israel's government three months ago (JP, Feb. 25, '55) to succeed Pinhas Lavon as minister of defense. He had been in retirement for more than a year, following his resignation from the premiership which he held for five years.

ISRAEL, EGYPT STRIFE FLAREUP HEIGHTENS NEAR EAST FEVER

JERUSALEM (JP)—Israel and Egypt once again stood on the bloody brink of battle this week after a series of border outbreaks which has heightened tension on the Gaza frontier to near the breaking point.

The flood tide of a week of hostilities was reached when Israeli and Egyptian mortars and artillery thundered for more than two hours near Kisuftin, the scene of two clashes in the Gaza strip earlier this week. Machine guns joined in the fireworks which Israelis charged was touched off by the mining May 17 of an Israeli patrol car, killing three Israeli officers.

BURNS

In retaliation for the patrol car incident, Israeli soldiers attacked and blew up Egyptian positions in the Kisuftin and Deir el Balah area.

ACCORDING to an Egyptian military spokesman, six Israeli trucks crossed the demarcation line Saturday, Israeli troops dismounted near Deir el Balah, took cover and then opened fire with machine guns on an Egyptian position.

The Egyptian commander ordered artillery brought up and returned fire with mortars and field guns.

"The attackers then called for reinforcement while Israeli posts on the other side of the demarcation line opened up with artillery," the Egyptian spokesman charged.

After two hours of fire-fighting the Israeli forces withdrew, the Egyptian said. He reported traces of Israeli casualties, but said no Egyptians had been killed.

THE ISRAELI version of the story differed from the Egyptian spokesman's charges.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military spokesman said an Israeli patrol was moving along the armistice line, marked with white-painted stones, when the Egyptians fired upon it.

"The Israeli force replied, silenced the Egyptian guns, and continued its patrol," the spokesman said.

Both Israeli and Egyptian officers complained to the Mixed Armistice Commission over the incidents and have refused to attend a meeting with United Nations truce supervisor Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns.

U. S. 'Concerned' By Israeli Raids, Says Ambassador

JERUSALEM (JP) — United States Ambassador Edward Lawson this week told Israel of his government's "grave concern" over recent Israeli attacks on Egyptian positions near Kisuftin in the Gaza strip.

Lawson, in a visit to Premier Moshe Sharett, reportedly advised the prime minister to adopt a policy of moderation and to co-operate more fully with Maj. Ben. E. L. M. Burns, United Nations truce staff officer in Palestine.

It was reported by United States Mgr.

'Law Of Jesus' Amendment Bill To Try Again

WASHINGTON (JP)—A Presbyterian minister has announced the revival of the proposal that "the authority and law of Jesus Christ" be proclaimed in an amendment to the United States Constitution.

The minister, Rev. A. J. McFarland, of Pittsburgh, executive secretary of the "Christian Amendment Movement," said the proposal would be reintroduced in Congress by Rep. Robert D. Harrison (R-Neb.), who led an unsuccessful fight for a similar measure in the 1954 Congressional session.

Representative Harrison's proposal was similar to a measure sponsored in the Senate by Sen. Ralph Flanders (R-Vt.), which also failed in the 1954 session. When the Senate subcommittee last year voted to table the bill, Senator Flanders said he would not reintroduce it.

California FEPC Bill Passed

By State Assembly

LOS ANGELES (JP) — For the first time in its history, the California assembly, meeting in Sacramento, has passed a bill creating a Fair Employment Practices Commission.

The bill, passed by a 48-27 vote, now goes to the state senate where no FEPC bill has ever been reported out of committee and to the floor. This bill declares it is the policy of the state that all persons have the right to jobs without discrimination or abridgment on account of race, religious creed, color, national origin or ancestry.

Anyone violating the bill's provisions would be guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to six months in a county jail and a fine of as much as $500.

Former governor, now chief justice of the United States, Earl Warren, tried many times to get an FEPC bill enacted by the

JEWISH ATTORNEY EXPELLED FOR SELLING NEGRO A HOUSE

ST. LOUIS (JP)—Louis A. Mitleider, of the Mitleider Real Estate company here, has been expelled from membership in the St. Louis Real Estate Board because he sold a house to a Negro.

Mitleider's expulsion was announced by Sam Michelson, president of the Board. Both Mitleider and Michelson are Jews.

Mitleider violated a rule of the board which reads:

"No member may directly or indirectly sell to Negroes, or be a party to a sale to Negroes, or finance property for sale to or purchase by Negroes, in any block, unless there are three separate and distinct buildings in such block already occupied by Negroes."

Mitleider, who has been a board member for 15 years, told THE POST that he intended to fight the ouster.

Michelson said that Mitleider was a member of the board's Protection of Property Committee, which had jurisdiction over violations of board's rules of this kind. He said a member can't do as he darned pleased, and had to abide by the organization's rules. He said Mitleider admitted the violation.

The property in question is located in the 130 block on Laurel, which is a Jewish neighborhood into which Negroes have been moving.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE!

WONDER OF WONDERS! MEN SEEM TO LIKE SALADS THESE DAYS

By SARAH LIEBER

This must be a new generation of young men. Recently we entertained some of the youths in their early twenties, and I was prepared to urge on them, as I have had to on other men-folks, salads and green vegetables. Usually I have found that all kinds of devices and subterfuges were necessary to get the menner to eat what is considered nutritionally sound. But wonder of wonders, these young men not only ate the greens with relish, they asked for more, and I had to go out to the kitchen and mix up another bowl of salad. Could be that all the careful feeding of babies and young children has resulted in the formation of taste and habits. Gone are the days when the balaboste knew only potatoes for the vegetable. And it looks, if these young people are a sample, as though the men who liked anything as long as it was meat and potatoes have learned to like other dishes as well.

All of which makes it more fun for the kitchen kinstler. It is rewarding to try out unusual combinations of vegetables, or of fruits, both hot and in salads. And for milchig meals of Shavuot what could be lovelier than a varied vegetable plate with a main dish of starch and cheese, whether it be noodles, rice or potatoes combined with cheese.

CASSEROLE OF POTATOES AND COTTAGE CHEESE

6 medium-sized potatoes, pared and sliced thin

- 1 tsp salt
- ¼ tsp pepper
- 1 pound dry cottage cheese
- 4 tblsps cracker or bread crumbs
- 3 tblsps butter or margarine
- ½ cup cream

Butter a casserole. Arrange a layer of half of the potatoes on the bottom. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Strain the cheese through a sieve or press. Place half of the cheese on top of the potatoes. Make a layer of the remaining potatoes, then of the cheese. Dot with butter. Pour in cream. Cover and bake 45 to 50 minutes at 350 degrees or until the potatoes are tender. Remove cover to allow the top of the casserole to brown. Serve hot with sour cream, cheese sauce, or tomato sauce if desired. Serves 6.

SPECIAL SIMCHA HONEY CAKE (LEKACH)

(Requested by Mrs. M. Levy, Baltimore)

- 4 eggs
- ½ cup strong coffee
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup honey
- 2 tblsps salad oil
- 3½ cups flour
- 1½ tpsps baking soda
- ½ tsp salt
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- ½ tsp ginger
- ¼ tsp nutmeg
- dash of cloves
- ½ cup chopped nuts
- ½ cup raisins
- ¼ cup citron or other candied fruit
- 2 tpsps brandy flavoring or 2 tblsps brandy

Beat the whole eggs, adding sugar gradually until mixture is light in color. Dilute the honey with the hot coffee, add oil, and let cool to lukewarm. Blend into egg and sugar mixture. Sift all dry ingredients together. Add to creamed mixture, stirring in fruits and nuts before the flour has been absorbed, so that fruits and nuts are flour coated. Add flavoring or brandy last. Bake in oblong pan which has been well greased, lined with paper, and greased again. Bake in preheated 300-degree oven one hour or until firm. Cool in the pan before removing and cutting. Note: You may omit or change any of the spices to suit the taste of your family. Makes one cake 9 by 12.

REFRIGERATOR CHEESECAKE

- 3 cups crumbs (cookie, cereal or zwiebach)
- ½ cup soft butter or margarine
- 2 tblsps sugar
- 2 envelopes lemon gelatine
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 pound soft cottage cheese
- juice of 1 lemon
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Blend crumbs, butter and sugar together. Press into the bottom of a greased spring form pan. Dissolve gelatine in about one-half cup boiling water. Stir well, then add milk, and yolks. Cook in double boiler long enough to thicken. Cool. Beat in cheese. Add lemon juice. Taste and add sugar if you desire. Beat egg whites stiff. Fold in. Beat cream. Fold in. Pour into pan on top of crumb crust. Chill at least three hours or over night. Run knife or spatula around inside rim of pan. Remove sides of spring form. May be garnished with fruit or jam if desired. To store, keep under refrigeration. Serve 8 to 10.

A Word To the Wives

I plan to grow a small row of potted herb plants on the kitchen window sill this year.

And now I have read of a small herb garden which may be grown by wetting an especially treated paper with the seeds already in it. Hope it works.

We were delighted the other day to see how many new varieties of kosher cheese are packaged and sold in the stores. Makes planning the dairy meal so much more interesting.

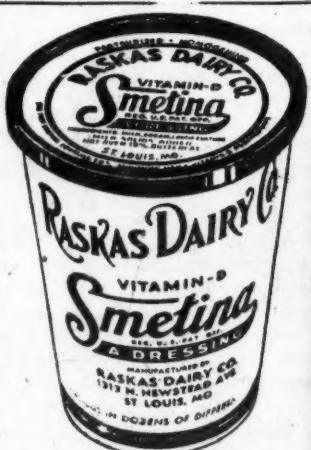

This may be a busy yomtov in many homes. The Reform religious schools hold confirmation services for the young people.

And the celebration of the giving of the law is a beautiful ceremony in all synagogues.

Gut Yomtov to you all.

ONLY 4 JEWS ATTEND DINNER

Methodist Church In Texas Finds Kosher Food Pleasing

By IDA M. BARKAN
Jewish Post Correspondent

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.

The kosher dinner held by the Jefferson Methodist church of San Antonio recently would still have been kosher even if the four Jews present hadn't been invited.

When the church's campaign for funds for building additions reached the "loyalty-dinner" stage, the committee in charge was stumped. Hotel reservations for 650 people would cost a lot of money, money that it was trying to raise, not spend. Renting a place and cooking their own meal, on the other hand, was impossible because it knew of no hall in San Antonio that was large enough.

Finally, someone thought of the new Agudas Achim synagogue, only a few blocks away.

WHEN THE church's request was referred to the synagogue, the authoritative committee there agreed to let the Methodists use the synagogue auditorium and kitchen, but not as a rental project. It was offered free of charge, with one condition—the dinner had to be strictly kosher.

To help the Methodists, Mrs. Sam Hymen, the synagogue president's wife, was placed in charge of arrangements.

"I ordered the meat from our butchers," she said, "and told them—the butchers—to kosher it. I made sure the baker would not use milk in any of the rolls or pastries and no milchig nor non-kosher shortening. I introduced them to parve margarine and suggested that tea would be more advisable than coffee, since they couldn't have any cream."

SHE ALSO explained the necessity for working in the flashboard kitchen only and asked the church women to use the detergents—the kosher detergents—already in that kitchen.

"THIS IS wonderful," said one woman, placing bowls of flowers on the tables. "I can go home and rest before I dress and still get back in time. . . . We're awfully glad you folks became our neighbors."

"We certainly are," said another woman, coming out of the kitchen with a tray full of parve jelly rolls.

Later, during the dinner, the Rev. James William Morgan referred to the fact that about three years ago the Agudas Achim Talmud Torah used his church's facilities for classes, in order to serve pupils who lived too far from the synagogue's own school building.

"WHEN WE THINK of the small rooms given to the Hebrew school," said Rev. Morgan, "and compare them with this splendid gift of facilities we can truly say that our bread cast upon the waters has come back with jelly on it."

Rabbi Sydney Guthman said: "Though we all understand that there are basic differences between the church and the synagogue, it is wonderful to behold the spirit of friendship and helpfulness that exists between our two groups."

Other people at the dinner expressed the hope that the good-neighbor policy exemplified there might spread throughout the land.

IT'S THE TRUTH!

THE FIRST American President to appoint a Jew to the post of ambassador was President Theodore Roosevelt!

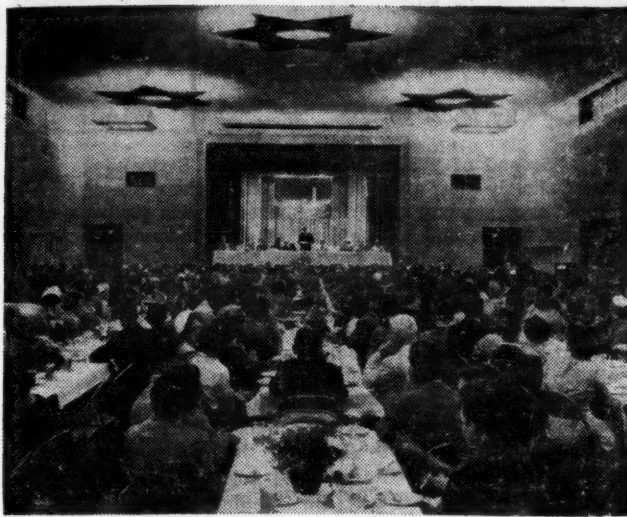

UP TO RECENT years there has never been published a full translation of the Talmud in Hebrew! The greater part of what is known as the Babylonian Talmud is in Aramaic!

FOR A PERIOD of 460 years no rabbi ever officiated at religious services in Mardir, Spain. The chain was broken by a New York rabbi in 1953 who visited the community of 1,000 Jews there for that purpose!

THE "TALLIS" as originally worn by Jews in olden days contained in it a blue thread!

THE FAVORITE quotation of President Dwight D. Eisenhower is the passage taken from Psalms XXVII:1, which reads: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

IN 1950 it was estimated that more than 75 per cent of the world's Jewish population either spoke or understood English!

Want to know what your name means? Address your question to Mr. Pearlroth, National Jewish Post, Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

By N. PEARLROTH

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: I have been an interested reader of your column in THE JEWISH POST and would like to know the derivation of my name which as far back as anyone of my family remembers was Monastersky. We originated from the province of Podole on the Boh river and the villages of Krivoi-ozers, and Holowaniewski in Russia. — MAX MASS, M. D., Macon, Georgia.

MONASTERSKI is a name of geographical origin. It was adopted from the name of the town of Monasterskie in the district of Braclaw which is located in the same gubernia as the two villages you mentioned. The geographic name is akin to the English "monastery," meaning "a dwelling of monks, attached to a church." The territory had a special Jewish interest. It was the locale of several Jewish colonies where an attempt was made by a former Russian government to settle Ukrainian Jews on the soil. I am acquainted with the history of two of them, Geldinowa and Pokutynowa. Like most Russian government undertakings of this type, they ended in melancholy failure.

Even Rothschild Could Be Wrong

by M. Z. FRANK

(Second of Taxation-Representation Series)

In 1882, shortly after a wave of pogroms in the south of Russia, a movement arose among some Russified Jewish students to return to their people and to the land of their ancestors. At the same time other Jews—plain everyday Jews of the ghetto—also felt inclined to migrate to Palestine and take up agriculture, rather than join the mighty stream of emigration to the New World. This was the beginning of the first aliyah, or first wave of immigrant pioneers. The students in that wave formed an organization known as BILU.

One of the BILUists was a young engineer by the name of Joseph Feinberg who had studied in Switzerland and held an important post in a large factory in Kiev. He took his pretty young wife, the gifted musician Bertyusha, their two children, and went to settle in the wilderness of Judea.

THE COLONY which Feinberg founded is still known as Rishon-le-Zion (First of Zion). Others of his contemporaries founded other colonies at the same time—Jews from Rumania in what is today Zichron Yaakov, and a few others. In Rishon-le-Zion, in the wilderness of Judea, sounds of a piano playing were heard for the first time since God created that country when Bertyusha Feinberg played. She did all the menial chores of a fellow woman and drank water mixed with worms and leeches, but she played the piano.

The pioneers had miscalculated.

ed. They had not brought enough capital and what with a drought, what with their inexperience and unfamiliarity with the country, they had nothing to eat at the end of the first year.

And so, Joseph Feinberg, as the intellectual leader of the colony, was sent to Europe to seek financial assistance. After many futile searches, Feinberg found a man who was ready to help. In fact, he had been waiting for an occasion to help build up Jewish agricultural colonies in Palestine. That man was Baron Edmond Rothschild of Paris.

ROTHSCHILD saved Rishon-le-Zion and Zichron Yaakov and the other colonies. He gave more and more money each year, without expecting anything in return—least of all publicity, for he insisted on remaining anonymous. There was only one thing he wanted: Obedience. Not only to himself, but to his appointed officials. Rothschild thought he knew what was best for the colonists. After all, they were only East European amateurs, and he was the greatest banker in the world, the impersonation of the Western know-how. Besides, he was a pious Jew and wouldn't stand for any radical nonsense.

The first victim of the baronial regional was Joseph Feinberg. He was too independent, too well-educated to become a mere robot in the Rothschild empire. Others followed. Some left; some were thrown out. Most gave in, with or without a struggle. The sycophants prospered. The spirit of the colonists was broken.

Rothschild saved the Jewish colonies, but he also demoralized

FAMILY PSYCHOLOGIST

ASSURE CHILD'S REGULAR ATTENDANCE IF JEWISH SCHOOL SEEMS WORTHWHILE

By MILTON A. SAFFIR, Ph. D.

Director, Chicago Psychological Guidance Center

"Please excuse Leonard for being absent from Hebrew School Thursday," read the note from his mother, "because he had to go for a haircut." Mr. Rabinowitz, the teacher, sighed wearily. This was Leonard's 10th absence in two-and-a-half months, and the reason each time was of the same flimsy nature.

It is true, of course, that a child who attends Hebrew School has less free time during which to schedule dentist's appointments, shopping trips, and the like. But no matter how much extra planning it may take, the conscientious parent sees to it that his child's schooling is not interrupted except for the most serious and urgent reasons.

FAITHFUL, REGULAR attendance is an important condition for successful learning.

them. It took him—a stubborn man—a good many years to realize his mistake. In the end he turned back the colonies with all their improvements to the farmers, and they have done fairly well since then.

ROTHSCHILD was one of the noblest figures in modern Jewish history. No one—not even Joseph Feinberg, who was Rothschild's victim—ever accused him of any unworthy motive. It was the regime that was wrong. French-speaking bureaucrats tyrannized the farmers, created a pseudo-Parisian elite of petty snobs, hampered the rebirth of Hebrew, and made the farmers feel that their aim in life was to collect the Baron's dollar rather than to make an honest living. The farmers' wives and daughters tried to emulate the styles of Paris. Their sons migrated overseas.

If not for the fresh wave of pioneers of the second Aliyah (1904-1914) all the money that the baron lavished on the colonies might not have prevented the total disintegration of the Jewish colonization in Palestine. Among the pioneers of the second aliyah was David Ben-Gurion (who came in 1906). He saw the demoralizing effect of the baron's regime at its worst. Maybe that is why he is so bitterly opposed by the rule of the donors from a distance.

whether the pupil has private lessons or is a member of a class. A school organizes its work according to a program, called the curriculum or course of study, so that each lesson or class session covers material that progresses from the previous one and prepares for the next one. Even when a class period is devoted to review or drill, it is a necessary step in the logical, orderly sequence of learning activities that constitutes an educational program.

When a student is absent, there is a break in the continuity, a gap in what he has learned. Of course, the program moves along slowly enough, particularly with young children, so that the youngster who is out because of illness does not suffer damage that cannot be made up at least in part. But interruptions in regular attendance, even when unavoidable, are interferences. Frequent absence is one of the most common causes of failure and poor marks.

A parent who sends his child to a Hebrew School should not jeopardize his progress by encouraging, or permitting, needless absences. Most instances of irregular or interrupted attendance can be prevented if the parent is willing to undergo the inconvenience of special arrangements to take care of what would more easily be handled during school hours.

BUT THERE is an additional reason for avoiding absences, aside from what the child misses when he is away. The child's attitude toward his schooling, an all-important element in determining what sort of education he receives, is influenced by the value he attaches to his attendance. If he is permitted to be absent for all sorts of inconsequential reasons, the importance with which he regards his school is diminished, or may even be destroyed.

He knows that his parents will insist on those things which are really worthwhile, though they will tolerate postponement or interruption of those matters which are secondary in importance. Because Hebrew School lacks the compulsory feature which characterizes the child's experience with the public school, it is particularly necessary for the parents to make the child feel that they regard it as valuable.

If Jewish education is worthwhile, regularity of attendance should be a must!

VIEWPOINT

By HELEN COHEN

BETTER TO KEEP SOME THAN TO REJECT ALL

I HAVE SEVERAL letters on my recent column pertaining to our traditional regulations on marital relations. One was from a young bride-to-be who inquired where she could obtain information with which she would be guided in her forthcoming marriage.

For this young lady who comes from a traditional home, I would suggest she talk to both her rebbeztin and her doctor. There are detailed instructions in the Shulchan Aruch on the subject, but we might summarize them briefly as insisting on separation of husband and wife during and several days after menstruation plus complete and careful bathing before resuming relations.

Another letter, representative of several others criticizing me for not accepting unquestioningly all the rules in the Shulchan Aruch on this subject, is from Mrs. Gertrude Fuchs, 66 S. Ninth St., Brooklyn.

It is not my purpose, Mrs. Fuchs, to discourage people like you who are content in observing all the regulations. I am concerned about the vast majority of Jewish women who not only don't observe any of the rules but are ignorant that they even exist. As I pointed out, since we are aware that the Jewish group has been remarkably free from such diseases as cancer of the womb, it is only good sense to inquire into the way of life of our ancestors that produced this condition.

THAT IS WHAT I tried to do in that column, emphasizing how our forefathers stressed cleanliness and separation of man and wife during menstruation.

Now, why is it that so few of our young women know anything about our traditional customs concerning marital relations? My guess is that their mothers before them discarded or disregarded the rules for the same reason that they turned away from other practices such as kashruth and preparing for holidays—because of the attitude of the religious leaders that it must be "all or nothing."

In the keeping of a kosher kitchen, the women were told: if you don't do it right, with separate dishes and separate dish towels and all, you may as well not keep anything. And so, unwilling or unable to accept every detail, the women threw out everything, even such basic things as a festive Sabbath meal, the Seder, and using kosher food.

SO, TOO, in the realm of marital relations. Since it was accepted that it must be all or nothing, some of the women felt that the "all" was out of line with common sense and decided to ignore the whole idea. Such rules (which must have grown up as a fence to straighten the law) as husband and wife not daring to touch one another or hand an object to one another during the period when they were to remain separate must have sounded far-fetched to modern women. And the waiting period of 12 days each month must have seemed an unreasonable burden, especially to young marrieds in love. (More on that 12-day wait in a moment.)

The big difference in throwing out the makings of a kosher kitchen and the basic rules on marital relations is that, except for such matters as pork which we can prove is unhealthy to eat, the results of our traditional practices in the kitchen are rather intangible.

BUT IT IS definitely a matter of physical health being affected in the latter. Should our women be told you must accept every little detail as laid down in the Shulchan Aruch or else forget the whole thing? Is it not better to let all the women and men benefit by keeping the most important practices?

You might ask your rabbi, Mrs. Fuchs, what the original law had to say about the number of days a couple should remain apart. In Leviticus XV, 19-24, you will find that "if a woman have an issue she shall be in her impurity seven days." Maimonides listed the uncleanness of a menstruous woman as commandment 99 of the 613 Divine commandments; and in his note on this law Rabbi Charles Chavel writes: "... the issue having ceased before the sun has set on the seventh day, she is to immerse herself that night and may enter into conjugal relations..." Chavel points out that this was changed later by rabbinic ordinance "to seven completely clean days."

ON THIS point, we could note that for many women the period of menstruation only lasts for three days each month altogether, giving her four clean days in which to recuperate, if she remains apart seven days.

As for going to a mikve, the commandment on immersing ourselves in an immersion-pool (No. 109) comes from the line in Leviticus XV, 16 "then he shall bathe all his flesh in water" which sounds like a job our showers and bathtubs are well equipped to do.

I was quoting from the text "Life Is With the People" when I wrote that the women felt "avoidance rather than immersion represents the essence of the law." And that book is a scientifically compiled study of life in the east European ghettos whence came your grandparents and mine (or at least the vast majority of Jews living in America today). So I didn't say it. That was how many of our grandmothers felt.

AROUND TOWN — Last week a group of Christians paid tribute to the Jewish Tercentenary "over the dead body" of tyrant Peter Stuyvesant. The Rector and Vestry of St. Mark's In-The-Bouwerie, a Protestant Episcopal church beneath which Governor Peter Stuyvesant is buried, held an historical ceremony commemorating the 300th anniversary of the first Jewish community in America. . . . Rabbi David De Sola Pool, of the Spanish Portuguese Synagogue, invoked a blessing from Leviticus, standing in front of a candle-lit altar, featuring the ascension of Christ in a frieze. . . . Following the services, a group of students from the East Side Hebrew Institute performed Israeli dances in the church courtyard.

ACROSS THE RIVER — For the first time in its history, the Jersey City Medical Center will have a kosher kitchen. . . . Mayor Bernard Berry also promised that city's "Council for Kashruth and Traditional Judaism" a specially equipped room for circumcision. . . . Seems he's trying to make amends for leasing part of the hospital to Seton Hall university for a medical school. . . . A group of citizens, including Rabbi Benjamin Plotkin of Congregation Emanuel, is still fighting the violation of "separation of church and state."

MUSIC

SOME GOOD REASONS FOR HEARING ISRAEL SYMPHONY'S FIRST DISCS

By JOSEPH GALE

Since last week, when a story appeared here of how the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra made its first commercial recordings, I listened to the initial three albums and came away with a few impressions.

Electric and Musical Industries (U. S.) Ltd. is the company, and "Angel" the label. The albums are: (1) Symphony No. 1 in D Major, by Gustav Mahler; (2) Symphony No. 9, by Mahler, and

"Verklarte Nacht," by Arnold Schonberg, and (3) Symphony No. 3 in A minor and the overture, "Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage," by Mendelssohn.

The facts that for the orchestra these are recording firsts and that it is the debut of the Philharmonic on commercial records, are cogent reasons for looking into these elegantly packaged discs.

Mrs. Rose Publicker, 73

PHILADELPHIA — Mrs. Rose Publicker, whose husband was chairman of the board of Publicker Industries, Inc., until his death in March, 1951, died recently. At the time of her death, she had been in the Einstein Medical center several days under treatment for an heart ailment.

THERE ARE OTHERS. The IPO has one of the richest and most sonorous string sections of any orchestra in the world, and the other choirs of the ensemble are almost equally fine. The beauty of the sound these men and women produce, and the glossiness with which it is reproduced, is awakening, to say the least.

But like a garden of glorious bloom gone to pot for want of a fine landscaper, IPO is an untended Eden full of promise, but undisciplined and under-directed.

Paul Kletzki, the conductor in these recordings, plays notes, but little else; he reads the score, but leaves out of it the spark of life.

In the Mahler First Symphony, as indeed in all the works, his tempi are too slow. The orchestra seems to understand the pantheism of Mahler, but Kletzki doesn't. His single phrases are well-enough executed, but the conception welding them into a whole is non-existent. And in the tremendous 9th, where Mahler himself had tortured difficulty with inner expression, Kletzki's well-intentioned but clumsy hand is no help.

"VERKLARTE NACHT" combines the most and the least of the set — the most because it shows off the strings to full advantage, the least when Kletzki misses the message of frustration and love imbedded deep in the story. Here, if anywhere, was Pygmalion's chance to rise, and again he plays nothing but notes on paper. Yet the music is so terrifyingly beautiful that nothing can really stop it.

Vision is the word, and vision is what Kletzki strives for but falls short of attaining—by slim margins, I will admit, but there it is. The music and the orchestra are above him.

There are technical problems, such as the handling of brasses, which are solvable by engineering, but we won't go into them. IPO is quite an orchestra. It has more than possibilities. The potential shows well above the surface. But the Israel Philharmonic needs more than anything else a rigid disciplinarian who is yet a man of soul and insight, a permanent conductor. The orchestra is too good to let alone. These recordings, if not auspicious, are the fulfillment of a promise made when IPO played in this country a few years ago. I hope there will be more recordings, soon.

'THE GREAT FAIR' PROVES SHOLOM ALEICHEM TWIN OF MARK TWAIN

By MEYER LEVIN

THE GREAT FAIR, by Sholom Aleichem. Translated by Tamara Kahana. Noonday Press. $3.75.

Written in easy breaths, these scenes from the childhood of Sholom Aleichem form a classic picture of the townlet of old, and of the basic Jewish community with its cheder, its shul, its richer and poorer families, widows, match-makers, its chasidim, its enlightened scholars.

In the warm Aleichem glow, the true characters who were the originals for so many of his fictional characters, here have their being. The town itself, Voronko, was to become renowned as Kasrilovka. From a boyhood friend, Schmulik the Orphan, a natural story-teller, came an ear for folk tales. Like the tale of the buried treasure of Chmielnicki, money stolen from the nobles and from wealthy Jews, hidden behind the synagogue, and discoverable only to someone who would fast for 40 days and perform certain Kabbalistic rites.

LEVIN

"RIGHT AFTER the sun has set, you've got to sneak out so that no one sees you, because if anybody does, God forbid, you have to start fasting all over again. Well, if you make it and no one sees you and it must be on a dark night, just before the new moon—you must go downhill to the other side of the synagogue, and there you stand for 40 minutes on one leg—"

Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn? And no wonder Sholom Aleichem was the twin of Mark Twain.

But this life-story does not go off into fictional adventures. In Voronko, Sholom Rabinowitz's father is considered well off. However, his business partner swindles him, and the family becomes impoverished. What does a family do, at such a time? It moves.

The children are left behind with aunts and uncles, while the father goes off to seek a new way to make a living. Eventually, the children are sent for. They ride on a wagon with three highly personalized horses, a la Sholom Aleichem, and they arrive at their new home in a larger town, to find that their father is now operating an impoverished inn.

CHOLERA COMES, and their mother dies. Again, they are sent off—to their "rich" grandparents, who turn out to be humble Jews of a town across the river. And eventually, their father finds a new wife, and the children come home once more. The stepmother is a virtuoso in old-fashioned Yiddish cursing, and in writing down a lexicon of her curses, the future Sholom Aleichem creates his first composition.

Eat—May the worms eat you!

Drink—May the leeches drink your blood!

Scream—Scream with a toothache!

Sew—May you be sewn in a shroud!

Strike—May you be stricken dumb!

Sit—Sit on live coals!

Lie—Lie under the earth!

AND SO IT GOES. But when Sholom begins to win prizes at school, a modus vivendi is arranged between the bright boy and his stepmother, and meanwhile the family fortunes take a turn for the better as his father goes into the wine business.

The book is filled with typical Sholom Aleichem scenes. There is the boy who experimentally puts a pea into one ear, to see if he can make it come out the other. And what troubles ensue, before it is got out! There are the shy romances, culminating in the romance with the Cantor's daughter who—of all things—runs off with a goy!

The translation is by Tamara Kahana, daughter of I. D. Bercowitz who translated Sholom Aleichem into Hebrew. And fully worthy of the family tradition.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR

A number of things, all of which are good, are happening to you are.

So it is with M. Z.'s book. The book is a series of translations of writings by Israelis, going back to the first aliyah (wave of immigration) about 70 years ago. I think I read about as much on Israel as most people do, and yet M. Z.'s book, or at least the rough drafts of some of the translations he let me see in advance, gave me a clearer understanding of why Israel is today what she is than almost any other one source.

I KNOW YOU'LL all want to get hold of a copy of the book as soon as it's out, which will probably be some time next month.

The third JP writer to make book news is Meyer Levin, who did the introduction, and probably considerably editing, although I don't know this, of the DIARY OF DAVE KOGAN. I found the book intensely interesting, although I'm afraid Meyer is a little too enthusiastic in comparing it with the Diary of Anne Frank.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Letters must be typed or printed clearly, double-spaced, on one side of the page only, and should be no more than two pages long. Only letters bearing the writer's signature and address will be printed. The Post reserves the right to condense letters. Reveals Why Jews Kept Quiet When Probing Jew Got Jailed

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

I was very much interested in your feature article concerning Aaron Kohn's imprisonment here in the city of New Orleans (JP, Apr. 22, '55), but I want to make the following comments, so that your readers can have a more complete picture of what actually took place.

Your correspondent mentioned that the prominent Jews of the community were conspicuous by their absence in support of Kohn. I feel that this is not completely correct.

First of all, we wanted to make sure that the matter would not become a Jewish issue, but remain as it was meant to be, purely civic.

Second, we felt that the effectiveness of rousing the community to action would depend upon the non-Jewish community taking the lead, as was done.

I preached on Aaron Kohn, and despite a downpour such as we have not had before or since this year a very fine crowd attended the services. Furthermore, when I announced that I was going to preach on him, the approval of the congregation was most enthusiastic.

I criticized Aaron Kohn for his unnecessary criticism of the mayor, even though I backed him completely in his action of not divulging the names of his confidential informers.

What is important to realize is that in our city support of Aaron Kohn was not made a Jewish matter at all. The leadership supporting him came from the Protestant churches, as well as by public-spirited citizens of all faiths.

As you stated, however, the Catholic clergy did not join in this leadership.

The reason for that was that northern Louisiana is Baptist, and southern Louisiana is Catholic, and there is tension between the two groups. It is considered usual that the mayor of New Orleans be Catholic and the governor of the state Baptist.

There is talk, though, that the New York

In today's turmoil in the world about us and more specifically in the Jewish world, there is so much need for guidance and inspiration from our rabbis that it is a matter of wonder that our congregations are not filled to overflowing at Friday evening services.

A rabbi normally speaks to his congregation at services no more than 50 times a year, what with vacations usually taking up about four summer months. There are in any one year burning issues arising which would provide for 200 or 300 sermons which would be so exciting because they attacked the issues head on that seats in the synagogue would be at a premium.

But the rabbi, either out of discretion or because he is unable to sense the real need of his congregants, usually discourses on some vague or entirely fatuous subject which has as its main purpose to get over with a weekly chore.

A glance at the sermon subjects delivered in any one week across the U. S. will bear out this point.

Our daily newspapers provide the ex-

We've often wondered why there is not more rabbinical support to the institutes idea in general and the B'nai B'rith Institutes of Judaism in particular.

We can remember one institute last year where the attendance was somewhere in the neighborhood of about 25. Yet any of the 50 rabbis in the two states which this institute covered could have taken up all the 50 available registrations just from his own congregation.

In fact, the remarkable thing is that it took laymen to develop the institutes idea on a national scale, when the rabbinic should have adopted this program if not long ago, at least by now when it has proven itself.

The institute is not a school; it's not drudgery; it's not even a task or a chore.

It's a delightful vacation experience. How many of you POST readers have gone on vacations which were flops be-mayor may run for governor. If he does, any embarrassment to him now could be disastrous. The Protestant clergy's leadership in the Aaron Kohn affair thus adds to the tension.

Those of us who are fond of the mayor and also feel that Aaron Kohn has done an honest job were heart-broken when these fine men did not agree. We felt that it was a basic misunderstanding that should be cleared up.

Happily, I can report that the man appointed by the mayor to make a self-investigation of the police department is, according to all reports and indications in the newspapers, now working in close contact with Kohn.

Our hope that the administration and Kohn be brought together seems to be achieving fulfillment.

Rabbi LEO A. BERGMAN, Touro Synagogue, New Orleans.

Wrong Neumann Disturbs Teacher

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

I would like to correct an error in the Apr. 22 NATIONAL JEWISH POST.

In the fourth column, front page, you have a picture of Neumann. This is a picture of Dr. Abraham Neumann, the president of Dropsie College of Philadelphia, not Dr. Emanuel Neumann, whom I know very well, and who was my private pupil in Hebrew for 13 years.

DANIEL PERSKY.

SPEAK UP, RABBIS!

ample of the leader taking up a burning issue and taking a stand, one way or another. Usually our papers publish three editorials, six days a week, offering guidance or criticizing or otherwise meeting some topical issue head on.

Yet comes Friday night our rabbis devote sermons—often not even thought-out ones—to such inconsequential topics that it is difficult to remember their subject once one has returned home.

There is no greater need in the Jewish community today than guidance. Our community wants to do the right thing, but often doesn't know what the right thing is.

Where is the spiritual leader that will don the mantle of a Stephen Wise and call a spade a spade, whether it means losing members or losing a pulpit.

Let the rabbi talk plainly, stop evading, tell his congregation or his community what they lack or why they deserve praise or criticism, and he'll be the most startled person in the world.

Instead of being kicked out of his pulpit, he'll be adored.

THIS IS LIVING!

cause they were dull and uninteresting? Of course, the food was good and the swimming and sports excellent, but you returned from your vacation no more exhilarated than if you had gone through two weeks of hard work.

You're the ones that need an institute.

Here you have everything you might have gotten at your favorite summer resort hotel, and a great deal of plus.

You return home excited. Your life has new meaning. Much of the confusion and doubt has cleared up and you have an awareness of life that makes what you're doing full and rich.

So find out where the closest B'nai B'rith institute is being held (there will be more than 30 this year) and avail yourself of the finest vacation you ever had.

This is fun. This is relaxation, and stimulation. This is living.

Reader Dislikes 'Women's View'

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

Your publication is an excellent one—it is well edited, makes for lively reading and is informative. Unfortunately, these assets are outweighed by the ignorant mouthings of Mrs. Cohen, particularly when she tries to pass herself off as an expert on religious laws and customs. I am referring specifically to her articles on revision of the "Shulchan Aruch" and the more recent one about the mikve. Why doesn't Mrs. Cohen go a step further and urge the abolition of the kashruth laws, two sets of dishes, etc., which make just as much or as little sense as the mikve, depending on your point of view?

The point I am trying to make is that Mrs. Cohen has bruised the sensibilities of traditionally minded Jews who have been brought up to revere our ancient heritage. We all transgress over some of our tenets—depending upon our religious education and environment—but we don't urge the abolishment of the values which have kept us together for several thousand years. It is a safe guess that they will outlive Mrs. Cohen.

In addition to her shallow thinking, Mrs. Cohen displays poor literary ability. I think that she would do better to devote her full time to her seven children, instead of writing on subjects about which she shows an abysmal ignorance.

I understand that the articles "Rambam" spelled backwards is not "mambo." Any square'll tell you "Rambam" is Hebe talk for "Maimonides." As President Teddy Roosevelt said to General Goethals, "Man, dig that crazy suit to injury and displayed an ditch." (JP, May 20, '55).

utter disregard for the feelingsBrooklyn MOSHE KOHN of those proud of their heritage.

Finally, the editorial comment you made some time ago about the frequency of Mrs. Cohen's attendance at the synagogue, to prove her faithfulness to her religion, is so asinine as not to be worthy of any comment. It's akin to the "some-of-my-best-friends-are-Jews" remark. It certainly does not meet up with your usual high-caliber editorials.

MEYER H. DISKIND, Brooklyn.

Women's 'View' Assailed as Biased

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

Inasmuch as my subscription is expiring, please do not bother to renew it, as I am not too pleased with the sensationalism that you have made a main feature of your paper.

I have also sensed a certain feeling of discrimination against Orthodoxy, especially in the audacious column by your female columnist. I cannot comprehend how an individual who is neither learned nor inspired with the spirit of our faith has the audacity to deprecate Jewish lore and law. I am particularly referring to the last article concerning the Mikveh.

RABBI MEYER J. STRASSFELD, Dorchester, Mass.

I THINK AS I PLEASE

It's Money Israelis Can Use
Rather Than Ties Or Hose

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA—What should you send to your relatives in Israel by way of gifts when an occasion calls for such remembrance? A case of stuffed Spanish olives for Aunt Tillie in Tel Aviv? A pair of Goodyear tires for cousin Chaim's truck? A deep freeze for sister Sarah in Kibbutz Yiftach? A bundle of clothing, new and second-hand, for the cousins in Maabara Tira?

ALPERT

There are far too many cases of thoughtless gift-giving from American friends and relatives, and these few words are written in the hope that they will be heeded by well-meaning American Jews.

The first rule to follow is NEVER to send a material gift without the knowledge and consent of the recipient. Don't plan to surprise them. You may get them into all sorts of difficulties with your good intentions. I can not here go into all the details of the various laws governing gifts received from abroad, but there are numerous items which cannot be received in Israel without an import license, previously obtained by the recipient. Gifts above a certain value also require an import license. The Israeli who is asked by the post office why he has not obtained the necessary import license for the package which has just arrived can explain that your gift has come without his knowledge, but the explanation will not spare him embarrassment, red tape, long delays, and finally the payment of customs duty and a fine as required by law.

SECONDLY, don't send things which are available in Israel. Three years ago, and even two years ago, there were still great shortages in the land, and your neighbor who visited Israel in 1953 may still be repeating stories about the lack of things.

Conditions have changed very substantially. There is very little that is today not to be had in Israel's stores. With all due respect to the excellence of American styles, efficiency of American production and ingenuity of American inventors, the locally produced items are frequently superior because they are crated for use in Israel with an eye on local conditions.

Clothing gifts cause no end of trouble. He who sends high-heeled shoes and nylon hose to a female relative in a kibbutz is just making a laughing stock of himself. The American who sends half a dozen new, loud neckties is in the same category. Much of the clothing sent for children, new or used, is discarded at this end, because the local youngsters don't want to be conspicuous by the difference in their dress. Neither do children anywhere.

Food packages and food certificates? Despite the advertising of the various companies, the prices are high, and the recipient at this end does not always get full value for your well-intentioned gift.

IF YOU DO want to assist a poor relative in Israel—one who may have written you about his economic difficulties—your assistance should take the form of money. Your cash, legally exchanged at this end for Israel pounds, will enable your relatives to buy almost anything they want. They can pick out the shoes or the clothes they need; they can buy the coffee or the other foodstuffs they prefer; they can obtain shiny, new, Israel-produced aluminum pots and pans for the kitchen; they can buy books or pay a dentist's bill, or make a down payment on an apartment, or do anything they wish within the size of your gift.

I assume that your relatives will have nothing to do with the currency black market, and will take your check to the nearest bank for legal exchange at the rate of 1.80 Israel pounds for each dollar. If the sum you plan to send is fairly large, it would be desirable, of course, to make the transfer directly from bank to bank, and your own banker will handle the transaction.

SUCH A GIFT not only gives the recipient the chance to choose whatever he needs, without fuss or bother or payment of import taxes, but it also provides the government of Israel with extra dollars. These dollars are used to buy food for the nation's markets, or to acquire productive machinery for Israel's factories, or to bolster the national defenses. Your dollar gift thus serves a double purpose. In effect, instead of making your purchase at the downtown department store, and adding to its already sizeable volume of sales, you are making your purchase within Israel, and directly aiding the national economy.

Your relative in Israel may be too polite to tell you what really happened to the last batch of second-hand clothes you sent him. He may be too proud to ask for money, but take a tip from me. You will be helping both him and the government of Israel if you send him dollars and cents, instead of dresses and suits.

Fund Raising
Reported Ahead
Of Last Year

NEW YORK—Early reports on the 1955 United Jewish Appeal campaigns indicate that fund-raising is well ahead of last year, according to the Council of Jewish Federation and Welfare Funds.

"With pledges approaching the half-way mark, the large cities are 7 per cent ahead of where they were at the same time last year," and "intermediate cities show a 12 per cent advance over 1954," says the report.

Sympathy For Jew Started
French Prexy On Way Up

The unjust prosecution of a Jewish officer was the spark which launched him on the political trail leading to the presidency of France. Vincent Auriol, former chief of state of the Fourth Republic, told a World Jewish Congress luncheon in New York. M. Auriol said that he was 18 when the appeals of such men as Emil Zola and Jean Jaures on behalf of Captain Alfred Dreyfus caused him to join the crusade for human rights. "There can be no peace in the world unless we give up sectarianism, because that life will lead to concentration camps and the crematoriums," M. Auriol asserted.

Exiled Yugoslavs
Want To Settle
Among Israelis

TEL AVIV (JP)—A delegation of 500 families of Christian farmers exiled from Yugoslavia wants to settle in Israel, says a recent report from Vienna.

The Yugoslavs are now living at a refugee camp near Salzburg, Austria, and their delegation says "the speedy development of Israel and the spirit of real freedom have profoundly impressed us."

Their idea to settle in Israel stemmed from the knowledge that an entire Italian village settled in Israel a few years ago and their Moshav in Upper Galilee is now a very prosperous one. When the Jewish organizations they approached told them, however, that the Italians, influenced by a dream of their leader, had become Jews, they quickly replied: "We must reconsider the matter. It will be discussed at a general assembly."
